NPR

"The 26-year-old talent returns, this time in a new light. Let's call him Gallant 2.0, the grown and sexy version."

Pitchfork

"There can be no abstraction here; "Gentleman" is full of flirtations and sensuality, painting Gallant as an old-school romantic."

Uproxx

"And it was beyond worth the wait – on the sensual and soulful ballad, Gallant graces us once again with his luscious, tantalizing falsettos that float above briskly brooding instrumentals."

Fader

"Gallant has finally returned to the scene, and with a bang at that. The R&B singer just shared "Gentleman," a deep, slow burning cut from his upcoming sophomore album that gave off steamy '90s R&B vibes."

Vents Magazine

"Representing a palpable and powerful evolution, the track conjures the spirits of late nineties and early two-thousands R&B... Over a minimalist hum, the artist's seductive and show-stopping falsetto blazes brightly and brilliantly."

The Interns

"It's a minimal, soul scorcher that takes obvious inspiration from D'Angelo's Untitled (How Does It Feel). That's not a bad thing though as Gallant expands on it with his glistening falsetto. There are few artists on earth right now that could deliver a vocal quite so spectacular."
